

COSGRIFF HOUSE, CHRISTOPHER POLLY

Christopher Polly played with notions of volume and extrapolation in his extensive remodelling of this home in Sydney's west. Vaulted ceilings combined with skylights maximise views of the treetops and ensure plentiful light.

In the bathroom, the blue and white geometric tile by Jatana seems to reflect the expanse of sky above, physically and visually connecting you to the setting. This connection is enhanced by the continuation of the graphic element from floor to walls, enclosing the space. Opposite walls are treated with matt white ceramic tiles, and this negative space calms the design. The simple lines of the Ideal Standard Acacia toilet and the Happy D basin console from Duravit allow the bright wall treatment the attention it deserves.

This home is in the running for a 2013 Australian Interior Design Award. Christopher Polly (02) 9516 5994, www.christopherpolly.com; www.australianinteriordesignawards.com.
